THE ANNUAL STOCKHOLDERS' REPORT

Some directors who are responsible for the Annual Stockholders' report, Use a certain technique or method to distract or distort.

They and their next of kin borrow to the limit during most of the year. Then they slyly pay off, before the annual report will appear.

If that's not enough, a fictitious name will be used. So that if anyone inquires, they may be somewhat confused.

Although they're guided by regulations, and have appeared in court, They side-step the truth, in their Annual Stockholders' report.
